The treatment approach for acute and chronic enteropathy can vary depending on the underlying cause and severity of the condition. However, the key to success is designing an optimal medical and nutritional treatment plan tailored to each pet's specific needs. During this webcast, Drs. Sarah Abood and Susan Kilborn will use a case-based approach to highlight important therapeutic considerations of acute enteropathy. They will also explore 'pain points' with routine and challenging chronic enteropathy patient cases.

Join us to discuss nutritional tips and medical recommendations for managing acute and chronic enteropathy.

Sarah Abood

DVM, PhD

Dr. Sarah Abood is an Associate Professor at the Ontario Veterinary College, where she teaches companion animal nutrition and supervises the Clinical Nutrition Service. Dr. Abood also consults with veterinary health care teams and the pet food industry. Between 1999 and 2016, she served as Assistant Dean of Student Programs at Michigan State University's College of Veterinary Medicine. During her time at MSU she taught small animal nutrition, communication skills, veterinary ethics, and veterinary leadership. In the mid-1990s, Dr. Abood worked in Research and Development at Ralston Purina. Her formal training began at Michigan State University (BS, DVM), followed by a large animal rotating internship at the University of Minnesota, and the completion of her nutrition residency and PhD at Ohio State University.

Susan Kilborn

DVM, DVSc, Dipl. ACVIM

Dr. Susan Kilborn received her DVM degree from the Western College of Veterinary Medicine at the University of Saskatchewan. After several years of emergency and critical care practice in Winnipeg, she completed a postgraduate degree in epidemiology and acid-base physiology through the DVSc program in Clinical Studies at the Ontario Veterinary College, University of Guelph. She became board-certified by the American College of Veterinary Internal Medicine in 1995. Dr. Kilborn currently sees referral internal medicine cases in Ottawa, consults for Antech Diagnostic Laboratories, and has been the Ottawa region and One Health director for Community Veterinary Outreach since 2005. She was the recipient of the Canadian Veterinary Medical Association Small Animal Practitioner Award in 2015. She is passionate about accessible care issues in the profession and serving vulnerable clients.
