The holiday season can be stressful for cats, pet owners, and the entire veterinary team. Last-minute “urgent” requests from anxious pet owners for medication, food, or in need of an appointment for their sick cats, vomiting, urinating outside the litter box, or even worse, with a possible urinary obstruction. Sounds familiar?

During this webcast, Dr. Anne-Marie Germain will share some helpful ideas, practical clinic tools, and sound bites designed to help cat owners better understand cats, help them optimize the environment to decrease stressors for their feline friends, avoid some mishaps, and be more prepared to help everyone enjoy a festive holiday season.

Join us to gain the knowledge and tools necessary to ease the holiday stress.

Anne-Marie Germain
BSc, DVM

Dr. Anne-Marie Germain graduated from the Ontario Veterinary College in 1999. Since graduation, she devoted several years to private practice, including nine years focused on her true love, cats, in feline-only clinics. She currently works in two feline-only practices in Ontario where she has a passion for raising awareness of feline environmental needs to reduce stress and optimize the mental and physical well-being of her feline patients. She also spent a portion of her career as a Technical Services Veterinarian and Scientific Communications Specialist in the companion animal nutrition industry. During this time, she provided individualized nutritional consultations and numerous continuing education events to veterinary teams across Canada. She worked closely with the Canadian Veterinary Urolith Centre and various specialists, developing a passion and subject matter expertise in the management of lower urinary tract disease in cats and dogs, particularly urolithiasis management and feline idiopathic cystitis. On her days away from the clinic, she continues to enjoy sharing her expertise with colleagues as a speaker.
